

‘Sanskrit Divas’ Observed with at Central Library: Celebrating Sanskrit Literature and Heritage

Ananda Mohan College observed ‘Sanskrit Divas’ on 31 August 2026 (Monday). On the occasion, the Central Library organised a special display of its old and distinctive Sanskrit book collections from 3:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., with the aim of creating greater awareness of these valuable library resources. The library exhibition showcased a rich collection of Sanskrit texts, including several Puranas, editions of the Ramayana, and other classical works, accompanied by Sanskrit Subhashitas with English meanings. The exhibition provided members of the College community an opportunity to engage with the Sanskrit literature preserved in the Library.

Faculty members and students visited the exhibition with keen interest. Dr. Subhra Ghosh and Dr. Pritilata Ray from the Department of Bengali, Dr. Kakali Singha from the Department of History, Dr. Malabika Chakrabarti from the Department of Philosophy and Dr. Debasree Chakraborty from the Department of Botany shared the significance and themes of selected books.

The Sanskrit Procession, comprising students and faculty members, concluded in front of the Central Library, where participants visited the special book exhibition and explored the displayed collections. The Principal, Dr. Debarshi Bhattacharya and the IQAC Coordinator, Dr. Attreyee Mukherjee also visited the display and appreciated the value and importance of the collection. The initiative highlighted the role of the Central Library in preserving and promoting the College's valuable literary and cultural heritage. The celebration provided a meaningful platform for appreciating Sanskrit as an important repository of knowledge, literature, and cultural heritage, while encouraging wider engagement with the College's valuable library collections.
